

Resource

Planning a family when you have RA

and

Pregnancy and arthritis

Louise Moore, advanced nurse practitioner in rheumatology, at Our Lady's Hospice and Care Services, Harold's Cross provides expert advice for women living with inflammatory arthritis who are thinking of having a family.

Click to close video modal

Rheumatology perspective

Prof. Douglas Veale, consultant rheumatologist at St Vincent's University Hospital, provides advice for women living with inflammatory arthritis who are thinking of having a family.

Click to close video modal

Close

Obstetrics perspective

Prof. Fionnuala McAuliffe, consultant obstetrician and gynaecologist, provides advice for women living with inflammatory arthritis who are thinking of having a family.

Click to close video modal

Close

Exercise in pregnancy with arthritis

Mary Grant, senior physiotherapist, provides advice on the importance of exercise for women living with inflammatory arthritis who are thinking of having a family.

Click to close video modal

Close

Stress, anxiety and fatigue in pregnancy

Emer Sheridan, senior occupational therapist, provides expert advice on managing stress, anxiety and fatigue during pregnancy if you have arthritis.

Click to close video modal

Close

This article was downloaded from www.nras.org.uk. National Rheumatoid Arthritis Society (NRAS) is a registered charity in England and Wales (1134859) and Scotland (SC039721). A private company limited by guarantee. Registered in England and Wales (7127101).