

Resource

Latest research updates

Research gives us a better understanding of what causes RA, how best to treat and manage the condition and hopefully one day how it might be cured.

[Print
Article](#)

Article

Genes and immune system affected by seasonal changes

A study in the UK has shown that there are changes in genetic and immune system activity depending on the season.

Article

Gum disease and RA

Gum disease is a bacteria known to cause chronic inflammatory gum infections and a "systemic" response seen in conditions such as RA.

Article

Moderate alcohol intake OK for RA patients on methotrexate

2017 study shows that while the risk of liver damage in patients with RA taking methotrexate increases with higher levels of alcohol consumption, the risk in those consuming 14 units or less per week is no greater than those who do not drink.

Article

Nerve stimulation study shows potential

Vagus nerve stimulation device offers hope for relief from rheumatoid arthritis symptoms.

Article

Reducing Heart Attacks

Risk of a heart attack in rheumatoid arthritis patients almost halved by biologic drugs

Article

Study shows smoking and being overweight affect RA

A study in Canada has shown that being a current smoker or being overweight or obese negatively affects RA symptoms over time.

Article

The link between RA and obesity

Researchers have discovered that obesity in women may have an impact on blood test results used to detect rheumatoid arthritis.

Article

The potential of personalised medicines show what RA medication would most likely work best for personalised or stratified medicine.

Article

Using a pedometer

Use of a pedometer increases activity levels whilst also decreasing fatigue in rheumatoid arthritis patients.

Article

What is Clinical Research?

The term "medical research" encompasses a broad range of activities within the clinical world, all aimed at improving or maintaining human health.

Article

Workers more at risk of RA in certain occupations

New research now indicates that there could be a raised risk of environmental factors thought to be involved in triggering auto-immune reactions for people working in certain occupations.

This article was downloaded from www.nras.org.uk. National Rheumatoid Arthritis Society (NRAS) is a registered charity in England and Wales (1134859) and Scotland (SC039721). A private company limited by guarantee. Registered in England and Wales (7127101).